BLACK ART ONPOTATOES

Del Adelphia, now a business man and a member of the town council of Tukwila, lays claim to having been the first person to carry the "black art" across the Arctic circle.

Adelphia since early manhood, and until only recently, has followed the vocation of magician, and his wanderings as such with various theatrical and vaudeville companies have taken him over the United States several times and into many foreign countries. In 1901 L. and his own company toured Alaska and northern British Columbia, giving performances at every station

"I shall never forget," said Adelphia in describing his northern trip to a group of friends recently, "the time performed before Chief Isaacs and bunch of his subjects at Moosehide, a typical northern Indian village a few days before Christmas, 1901. I had given a performance the day before at Dawson, and an acquaintance I had made there suggested that we could have some rare sport by invadthe Moosehide with magic.

"Accordingly, accompanied by my new friend, I drove over there the next day in a sled. The wonderment of the Siwashes was first excited when two mysterious-looking trunks were unloaded from the sled in front of the chief's hut. A few words to the chief by my friend put us in good with him and he invited us inside with our trunks, summoned the savages from the outside and introduced me in his crude way as the white medicine man.

"I had things all my own way, and during the performance I was able to resurrect old tricks that I had had to drop from my repertoire years ago because they had become so common that a white audience would laugh me down should I have the nerve to exhibit them in this day and age.

"I started off with the old threadbare stunts, such as palming cards, turning water into wine, etc., and it was not many minutes until I was looked upon by my ignorant audience as a veritable devil.

"What did those poor children of nature know about the double compartment pistol, the mysterious egg basket, the loaded hat or the traps in the tables? A chair to them was a chair, nothing more. The old chief was nonplussed when, after I had manipulated the egg bag for a minute. he asked to be allowed to feel inside it, and he found it was empty. Again he felt and it was full of eggs, eggs were everywhere-on the floor, under the table, in the folds of his garments, and he was given a great laugh when I even plucked a couple from his mouth. I guess he is still trying to figure out whence they came and where they disappeared.

"The abject simplicity of the natives was forcibly shown when I grabbed one of the youngsters by the nose and told him to blow through that organ. He did, and I told him sharply to 'blow hard.' This he did as I commanded, and I thought he and all the rest would drop dead when a whole pack of playing cards shot out apparently from his nostrils and fluttered to the ground. This trick was repeated by request upon another young native and another deck of cards was blown from a Siwash nasal appendage and scrambled for by the youngsters. I looked out of the door of the hut a few minutes later to see three or four of the little fellows outside holding each other's noses and blowing for dear life in an effort to produce more pasteboards.

"My potato trick, though, brought the show to a speedy climax If I hadn't stopped when I did I'd have been bankrupt. I asked old Isaacs if he had a potato. The chief ordered his squaw to bring one, which she did. I then called for a knife, and with the knife I started to cut the potato in halves. The savages crowded round me to watch developments and were amazed when the knife struck something hard in the center of the tuber. I could cut no further, but finally worked around the obstruction, and, when the potato was divided, there was a bright new half dollar. I tossed the coin outside and you should have seen the scramble

"I didn't have to ask for a second potato: the trick was repeated and another half dollar given the Indians as a souvenir. A third time I was prevailed upon by wondering hosts to open a potato, but by this time every buck, klootchman and papoose in the crowd was armed with a potato and clamoring to have it opened. I saw my finish looming up and not very far ahead. I saw the season's profits dwindling and it did not require a great stretch of imagination to pic ture a certain long-haired wizard stranded in the far and frozen northland, mushing his way out to civilization with gaunt famine dogging his

"'Let's duck-beat it!' I whispered to my white companion, and while I diverted the attention of the scrambling and insistent aborigines, my pal hustled our kits of paraphernalia to the dog sled and at the psychological moment I made a dash for liberty and we were off. "I heard since that our visit was followed by a potato famine in Moosehide, for no sooner had we left the village than the inhabitants in their mad quest for silver half dollars, ransacked the camps for potatoes and cut them into bits, cursing their luck and the 'white devil' for their disappointment. There wasn't a potato left in Moosehide."

EXPECT A GOOD LAMB CROP.

Indications Point to a Much Larger Number of Lambs in the West Than Last Year.

All indications and information point to a full lamb crop this year, says Breeders' Gazette. Lambing in Idaho has been on an unprecedentedly large scale. Some bad weather was encountered, notably in Wyoming and Utah, but feed was available and ewes are generally in condition to raise their lambs. Idaho, whence comes the bulk of the mutton lamb supply, will probably raise more than last year. Taking the west as a whole, it will be more than a normal crop owing to precautions generally taken to prevent winter loss.

East of the Missouri river about as many lambs will be raised as last year. There was some liquidation of stock sheep during the summer and fall of 1908 but a considerable number went out. Missouri, Illinois, Indiana and Ohio will have as many lambs if not more than a year ago. South of the Ohio river about the same number will be marketed, Kentucky and Tennessee not having increased breeding flocks materially.

As a portion of the western lamb crop was held back last fall, owing to rise in wool and a demoralized live nutton market, a heavy and early oun of fat grass yearlings may be expected, especially if prices prove attracive. Prospects for much better prices during the cummer months than were nuoted during the corresponding period of 1908 are excellent. Feed lots will be emptied much earlier than usual and butchers will be hungry for

The Dorsets, a cut of which is given above, are very popular as twin-lamb bearers and are a very hardy breed.

SCRAPER FOR THE FARM BARN.

One That Is Not Difficult to Make and Will Prove Serviceable for a Number of Years.

The cut shows a scraper that we have used in our stables for many

A Barn Scraper. years and which is now as good as new says S. B. Hartman.

Take a hardwood board 8x18 inches and bevel opposite edges as shown in the illustration. Bore two holes equal distance from each end and edge and slant for the insertion of the handle. Take a hickory, or other tough, green sappling, about six feet long, and drive an iron ring down to within ten inches of the larger end, or a few turns of No. 9 wire will answer. Split the lower end of the handle as far as the ring and wedge the ends firmly behind the board. If handle is properly fitted the scraper will be rigid.

One edge is used for pushing, the other for pulling. If to be used in a gutter, make board at least one inch narrower than the gutter to prevent binding.

Give Pigs Salt and Ashes.

By experienced breeders it is deemed advisable to keep salt and ashes where pigs can have ready access to them.

After pigs begin to eat grain they will visit the salt and ashes after every feed or oftener. It has been found profitable to keep he mixture in a self-feeder, in which a bucket ful of the mixture can be kept dry and from which the pigs can get it from an opening at the bottom.

By this arrangement there is a saving of labor and the pigs never get so hungry for it as to eat too much, as is the case when salt and ashes are given only occasionally.

The wisdom of this practice has been corroborated by numerous very satisfactory tests. Pigs fed corn meal with salt and water get very fat in a short time, but soon fail to improve. Pigs fed corn meal, hardwood ashes, salt and water do better and make better growth of bone. Pigs having ashes make better bone and better gain.

In the absence of ashes ground bone may be profitably fed.

Run for the Pigs.

No plan of feeding is complete without the daily run of the pigs and brood sows on pasture in summer, yet even with he grazing and the variety of grain, with corn as the chief ration, it has been found that pigs regularly fed salt and ashes with charcoal make better growth of frame and are less troubled with worms.

Paul's Third Missionary Journey

Sunday School Lesson for August 15, 1909 Specially Arranged for This Paper

LESSON TEXT .- Acts 18:23-19:22. Memry verses 19-20. GOLDEN TEXT.—"The name of the Lord Jesus was magnified."—Acts 19:17. TIME.—Paul began his third journey probably in A. D. 33, and it lasted three years, 53-56, or 57.

PLACE.-Paul ended his second journey by going to Jerusalem, and thence to Antioch. From there he went through Asia Minor, ending at Ephesus, tre capital of the Roman province of Asia. Suggestion and Practical Thought

How Paul Built Up the Religious Life of Ephesus. Paul Enters Upon His Missionary

Journey, and Strengthens the Older Churches.-Acts 18:22-23. When Paul had completed his second missionary fourney he went up to Jerusalem to pay his respects to the mother church there, and doubtless, as at other times, he told the wondrous story of the work of God in bringing so many Gentiles into the kingdom. Here he would remain long enough to complete his vow, the apostle to the Gentiles in loving accord with the mother church. Then he went down to the home church which had sent him forth. Here he was always welcome. Here he told the story of his missionary adventures, and the fruits of his labors. This is probably the last time Paul was able to visit Antioch. It is probable that while here Paul wrote the Enistle to the Galatins, on receiving the report of Timothy concerning the churches in that region, and not long afterward he himself went through the region of Galatia and Phrygia in order, strengthening the churches, for there was great need. (Gal. 1:6-12; 3:1-5; 5:1-12-15.)

Ephesus, which Paul made his headquarters for nearly three years of missionary work, was not only the capital of the province, but was the city of the greatest importaince in all Asia Minor, and principal emporium of trade in the east.

Paul Finds an Undeveloped Church of Ephesus, and Brings Them Into the Fulness of the Gospel Light.-Acts 18:24-19:7. The Eloquent Apollos. When Paul left Corinth at the close of his second journey, his friends Aquila and Priscilla went with him as far as Ephesus. Before Paul ontered upon his longer work at Ephesus there came a Christian Jew of great eloquence (v. 25) "knowing only the baptism of John; the gospel of repentance and forgiveness, and Christian morals, and of Jesus who proclaimed the kingdom of heaven at hand, and worked many miracles of love, and died on the cross, the story which was told in the earlier gospels. These things Priscilla and Aquila expounded to him. Then he went to Greece (v. 27) and "helped them much which had believed through grace." Of this Paul once speaks in his letter to Corinth, "I planted, Apollos watered God gave the increase." (1 Cor. 3:6).

Paul's Preaching and Teaching .-Vs. 8-10. First. In the Jewish synagogue. Three months. To Jews. As usual, Paul began with the Jews who were best prepared to receive the Gospel. "And spake boldly." It required no little courage to take the unpopular side, which had so often brought him into trouble.

Second. In the school of Tyrannus. Two years. To Gentiles. "Disputing," discouraging, arguing, "daily" and not merely on the Sabbath, "in the school of one Tyrannus." Nothing is known positively about this man.

"Continued . . . two years," in addition to the three months in the synagogue. "All they which dwelt in Asia," the Roman province of Asia, of which Ephesus was the capital. "Heard the word." Paul had with him a number of helpers, as Timothy, Erastus, Titus, etc.

Two Kinds of Testimonials to the Power and Value of the Gospel.-Vs. 11-22. In addition to the holy conduct and noble spirit exhibited in the ordinary daily life there were two outward and visible testimonies to the truth and power of the Gospel. First. Miracles of healing and help. "God wrought special miracles." "By the hands of" the instrumentality of "Paul." In Ephesus, the center of magic and witchcraft, special power was given Paul to work miracles that conquered them in their own stronghold. He actually did what the sorcerers pretended to do.

Self-denial for the Cause of Christ. Doing right at great cost. "Many that believed came, and confessed" that they had been using magical practices, but now, realizing that they were wrong, "shewed their deeds" by publicly confessing and renouncing all such heathen practices, by which doubtless they had been making money.

"Many of them," referring to those who had been magicians previous to their conversion, "which used curious arts," such as magic, incantations, sleight of hand, charms, secret knowledge of chemistry, hypnotism, jugglery, and everything by which they had deceived the people.

These men and women were in the habit of carrying about on their persons as charms or amulets to shield them from danger and from harm, or to procure them good fortune in their undertakings. We read how Croesus, when on his funeral pile, repeated these "Ephesian spells."

Light from the Orient.-In the Vienna museum are some very old manuscripts, called the Fayum manuscripts, some of them dated 1,200 years B. C., discovered a few years ago in Egypt. Among them are large quantities of magical writings, with
